All hands on deck for Syrian refugees

Metro | Ottawa

From university sponsorships to fund-raising pushes, it seems as if all hands are on deck in Ottawa to help with the Syrian refugee resettlement effort.

These efforts will culminate in the Syrian refugee forum on Thursday evening, when more than two dozen churches, non-profit groups and government agencies will meet to figure out how the City of Ottawa can help.

There will be a "special announcement regarding the co-ordination of sponsorship and resettlement efforts in Ottawa," according to a city press release.

Meanwhile, the city's post-secondary institutions are stepping up.

The students' association board of directors at Algonquin College has pledged $60,000 to help 12 full-time refugee students attending the school.

The University of Ottawa is starting a $400,000 fund for five new scholarships for refugee students, a new post-secondary certificate program to be offered in Lebanon to Syrian refugees and another program to help Canadians navigate the legalities of sponsorship.

The university is donating $200,000 to the fund and seeking donors to match that amount.

Carleton University has already sponsored two students from Syria and is looking to raise $12,500 to sponsor a third student.

After images of Syrian toddler Alan Kurdi's lifeless body went viral, many Canadians started looking for ways to help the Syrian resettlement effort.

Mayor Jim Watson has said he wants to fling open the city's doors to refugees.

+ FORUM

The forum on Syrian refugees will take place at Ottawa City Hall on Thursday starting at 5 p.m. There will be panel presentations starting at 5:30 p.m. and a legal clinic at 7 p.m.

QUESTIONS ABOUT THE CITY'S 2016 BUDGET

It looks like City of Ottawa staff will be squeezing the 2016 budget to offset a projected $36.3 million in net pressures. The finance and economic development committee review the plan Tuesday. Meanwhile, here's the gist:

Lucy Scholey
Metro | Ottawa

1 What's causing the budget pressures?

It's a mix of winter maintenance from stormy weather earlier this year, Workers Safety and Insurance Board costs, wage arbitrated settlements from 2015 and 2014, vacancies in 24/7 city operations, and unachieved revenue targets, like sponsorship. The report projects budget pressure projections in 2017 and 2018 — $23.4 million and $24.2 million, respectively.

2 So how will the city deal with the $36.3 million?

Here are a few ways:

- Increase user fees (the report did not specify which user fees)
- Reduce costs that don't affect service, like advertising
- Set department efficiency targets for paramedics, winter operations and parks, buildings and grounds
- Review revenue budgets
- Ask the unions to pitch in and help
- Reserve funds for 2016 and 2017 budget pressures.

3 What if I have an idea on how we can save city money?

Then hit up one of the last three citywide budget consultations, which run until Oct. 8. You can also email budget2016@ottawa.ca. The 2016 draft budget will be tabled at council on Nov. 12, with the final document adopted on Dec. 9.

4 What does this mean for my property bill?

Not much out of the ordinary, as of yet. City staff is trying to find ways to tackle these budget pressures, keep taxes increases "at a predictable and affordable level" and maintain services. They are recommending a 1.75 per cent increase on property taxes. With provincial rules in place, that will amount to about two percent on your property tax bill, which funds city and police services.

5 So what about water and sewer?

It will be six per cent higher. Note that with these tax hikes (they do not include the transit levy. That will be 2.5 per cent higher. More on that on page 5), the city is still saddled with $36.3 million.

POLITICS

Website tracks MP votes

Shay Neufeld was just looking for a way to track members of Parliaments' voting records in the House of Commons.

It seemed like something that should exist. Neufeld was looking to see how MPs voted on Bill C-51, the government's anti-terror law.

He found openparliament.ca, a definitive resource for parliamentary proceedings. But with many different readings of each bill and no way to easily track a single MP's voting record, it wasn't what he needed.

When he realized no such tool existed, the 27-year-old Vancouver native, a PhD candidate in neuroscience at Harvard University, decided to create one. He enlisted his brother, Braden, a talented computer programmer and website designer to help.

The result is votes.mp, a searchable website that displays MPs' voting records dating back to 2006. It's searchable by member, riding, postal code, bill number and name, and allows users to look at a single politician's voting history in the House of Commons.

"We really just wanted to come down to a simple tool for people to use for a single purpose," Braden Neufeld said.

The brothers said the website has been garnering a couple of thousand views a day, and they're pleased that it's taking off and fostering discussion. During Monday night's leaders' debate, traffic on the site spiked whenever a particular bill was mentioned.

Exhibit showcases Ottawa during prohibition

Lucy Scholey
Metro | Ottawa

Fifty years ago, patrons in Nepean Township could finally publicly raise a glass in their hometown.

It was among the last municipalities to quench prohibition in 1965.

Ontario dried up in 1916 after lobbying from the buzz-killing temperance movement. The group was led by a chorus of Protestant evangelical types, many who immigrated from Europe in the 19th century.

By the time 1919 rolled around, 225 people had been arrested in the City of Ottawa for defying the Ontario Temperance Act.

The province lifted its booze ban in 1934, leaving it up to individual municipalities on whether to let their draughts flow. By the 1940s,

Nepean residents could hop in the car and drive to the old City of Ottawa for a wee dram at the bar. (And, after a few drinks, they could have driven home, but that's a story for another day.)

The aptly named Taverns and Troublemakers exhibit opens at the City of Ottawa Archives at 100 Tallwood Rd. in Nepean on Thursday at 6:30 p.m.

It's full of interesting little tidbits about the days when serving beer was illegal. Like how Chateau Lafayette is Ottawa's oldest surviving tavern (it opened as Grant's Hotel in 1849). Or how "chimo," the Inuit word for "I'm Friendly," was Canada's official toast for its Centennial celebrations in 1967.

New vision set for Vanier church

HERITAGE

Developer plans to transform building into indoor market

Emma Jackson
Metro | Ottawa

Saint-Charles church off Beechwood in Vanier has always been a community meeting space, and the property's owners are more excited than ever to bring that back to the east-end neighbourhood.

The 107-year-old church welcomed 2,300 people last Saturday evening for a food truck rally in support of the Ottawa Community Housing Foundation.

The event was sponsored by the property's developer, Modbox, and its rousing success reaffirmed the developer's vision that this church can return to its roots as the centre of the community — not as a place of worship, but serving a different kind of devotee: foodies.

The plan is to turn the heritage church into a permanent indoor marketplace filled with local butchers, bakers and ice cream makers, according to Modbox's Melissa Reeves.

Similar to the St. Lawrence market in Toronto or the Chelsea market in New York City, the marketplace would be open year-round with individual shops selling their unique wares to the public.

Between eight and 10 boutique shops hocking local meats, cheese and even flowers would be built into what used to be the church's sanctuary, with a hip new restaurant taking over in place of the altar. Of particular note is the inclusion of an ice cream shop, which Reeves said the neighbourhood sorely lacks.

Part of the wide aisle that once ushered blushing brides to their waiting grooms could give way to a stairway down to the basement, which would offer even more commercial space below.

The property's redevelopment includes six to eight stories of new housing around the church as well, but Reeves said the plan has always been to keep the former church intact as a neighbourhood hub.

"This church has been an important part of the community, not just as a religious space," Reeves said. "This has been a gathering space for over 100 years."

It's been the meeting place for Scout and Girl Guide groups, community associations and town halls. And a secret society to protect franco-phone interests — once 11,000 members strong — was founded in the basement.

Since a small group of investors bought the property last December, Modbox and its architectural partner Linebox have been serious about keeping that community tradition alive.

They hosted a public "apres snow" event in February and a summer solstice party in June. The food truck rally was by far the largest gathering to date.

The plans also include outdoor space for a seasonal farmer's market and a sculpture garden.

The church's exterior is designated heritage and has to be preserved, but Reeves said they plan to keep the bones of the sanctuary intact, as well. The church was once lavishly decorated, but in 1969 it underwent major renovations and most of that was lost in favour of a more modern look, according to Museoparc, Vanier's community museum. Still, the tall columns and high ceilings that

The altar will be turned into a restaurant as part of the property's redevelopment. EMMA JACKSON/METRO give the church its grandeur still exist, and will be factored into the interior design.

"It's so beautiful, if you do anything to it you'll screw it up," Reeves said.

Modbox will likely submit its site plans to the city this November, Reeves said, and they hope to get construction underway in 2017. The marketplace should be open by 2018.

This church has been an important part of the community, not just as a religious space. This has been a gathering space for over 100 years.

OC Transpo out to balance budget

TRANSIT

Operator still needs to find 'efficiencies' after tax hike

Emma Jackson
Metro | Ottawa

OC Transpo is raising its transit tax by 2.5 per cent in 2016 as the operator faces rising costs and flat ridership.

An early budget report released Tuesday asks staff to craft a transit budget that finds $24.5 million in new money while limiting the transit-tax increase to 2.5 per cent.

Between the $9 million extra collected through that hike and another $6.9 million coming from fares, OC Transpo will still have to find $8.6 million in "efficiencies" to avoid going into deficit.

That process has already started, according to transit commission chairman Coun. Stephen Blais. He said five management positions were cut this summer, and the system is "becoming more efficient in how some of the routes operate."

But that hasn't been enough

We need to consider making sure we have an efficient and affordable system for the highest number of people that we can.

Coun. Stephen Blais

to fend off a rising tide of extra costs. Insurance claims were much higher than budgeted in 2015, for example, and as warranties end on the city's fleet of hybrid buses, maintenance costs are rising, too.

"In order to provide the same level of service doing the same work on the buses, we now have to spend more money," Blais said.

He said more details about OC Transpo's savings plan will come to the finance committee as part of the draft budget. He skirted the notion the transit operator is considering service cuts.

"We need to consider making sure we have an efficient and affordable system for the highest number of people that we can," he said.

Coun. Stephen Blais said changing the service's eligibility criteria doesn't have to cost more. EMMA JACKSON/METRO

ACCESSIBILITY

Para Transpo seeks to aid more for less

Just as the city prepares to tighten its belt, Para Transpo is considering how to serve people with intellectual and mental-health disabilities.

Provincial accessibility legislation covers both those groups, but right now Para Transpo's system decides each case based on how well the person can use OC Transpo.

When someone is denied, it's often because their illness is fickle: someone with anxiety, for example, may feel able to take the regular bus some days but not all.

This kind of "good day, bad day" condition is hard to assess, and right now it's not even part of Ottawa's equation. But it could be: Calgary has done it, offering several conditional categories. "Direct riders," for example, use accessible transit only when the regular bus would require a transfer beyond their capability.

But Anu Bose, who participated in Para Transpo's consultations, said all these good ideas were ignoring "the elephant in the room": what it's going to cost.

"We're making all these wild demands without knowing what's actually feasible," she said.

According to transit commission chairman Coun. Stephen Blais, the changes don't have to cost more if current users can be encouraged to take OC Transpo when they're able.

"Then we'll have more capacity within Para Transpo to transport those who have no other option," Blais said.

That's certainly the goal for Catherine Gardner, who uses a motorized wheelchair. She said there's no incentive for Para Transpo users to transfer from Para to regular transit because they've already paid for their trip.

She said bringing the Presto payment system into Para Transpo would encourage more cross-traffic. Creating a "hub and spoke" system connected to conventional transit stations would also free up space on accessible vans.

"I see many, many people on Para Transpo who maybe should be on OC Transpo," she said. EMMA JACKSON/METRO

Revised Rideau plan scrutinized

City planner Randolph Wang interacts with residents at a recent public meeting. STEPH WILLEMS/METROLAND MEDIA

'Density redistribution' under fire

The city is crafting a new direction for the future of "uptown" Rideau Street — the stretch between King Edward Avenue and the Cummings Bridge — but the neighbouring community disagrees on what form it should take.

A public information meeting held recently at De La Salle High School brought city planners and residents together to discuss the city's revised community design plan (CDP) vision for the area.

The city claims it wants a more liveable and varied streetscape that avoids the canyon effect seen in the stretch of Rideau west of King Edward. Density redistribution would see taller building heights allowed on parts of select properties in exchange for community amenities such as privately-owned public space.

The original CDP called for consistent mid-rise development of up to six storeys on the south side of Rideau, with taller allowable heights on the north side. In the revised plan, several blocks on the south side would be able to accommodate 14- and 15-storey buildings.

"We feel that this stretch of Rideau (Street) is not suitable for any 'density redistribution,' which is a concept that allows towers of up to 15 or 25 storeys, provided the average density is not larger than that of a six- or nine-storey building," Action Sandy Hill stated on its website in advance of the meeting.

CITY HALL

Hintonburg to get new street mural

Hintonburg, a community long known for its artistic prowess, is set to become a little more colourful.

On Sept. 22, the city's planning committee gave the green light to a planned mural that would adorn a concrete retaining wall that faces Garland Street, just south of Scott Street. Council voted in favour if it the following day.

Following the submission of a report by Kitchissippi Coun. Jeff Leiper, the committee waived two bylaws in order to allow the mural, whose actual street address would be 3 Lowry St. The installation is part of the city's mural program, an initiative designed to enliven streetscapes throughout the urban area.

The mural, which will be privately funded, was requested by the property owner of 3 Lowry in order to beautify the street, deter graffiti and promote the local arts scene.

"Roger Senecal, an area realtor, suggested painting a mural (on the wall)," said Leiper. "It has been a couple months in the works because it requires a rezoning ... I hooked him up with local artists and did a quick consultation with the Hintonburg Community Association's arts committee."

Leiper, who called the mural concept "absolutely gorgeous," said that with colder weather approaching, time was of the essence in requesting the rezoning. At committee, he asked his council colleagues to adopt the agenda item for the council meeting held the following day, something he wouldn't otherwise have done.

Normal process calls for the item to go to the council meeting two weeks hence, which would have seen approval granted in mid-October. The colder the temperatures, the less likely the mural would be painted before the onset of winter.

Ottawa artist ARPi has been tapped to paint the mural, which will be a depiction of urban plant and wildlife.

Police seek fraud suspect

Police are looking for a man they believe is responsible for several frauds targeting visitors and patients at local hospitals.

In the first case on July 17, an elderly woman reported that her purse was stolen.

About $3,000 was spent on her debit and credit cards at ATMs and stores on Preston Street, Carling Avenue, and at the Bayshore Shopping Centre.

In another incident in September, a 45-year-old woman and the male patient she was visiting in a hospital both reported their wallets stolen. Police said the cards in the wallets were used at various ATMs and stores on Carling Avenue.

Witnesses describe the suspect as black, five-foot-10, between the ages of 40 and 50, wearing "distinctive clothing."

Funding announcement for IVF delayed

Province holds off in order to hold more consultations

Would-be parents waiting to learn more about the Ontario government's funding of in-vitro fertilization treatments will have to wait a little longer.

Health Minister Eric Hoskins had been expected to announce details of the province's IVF plan Wednesday, but has decided to wait a little longer in order to hold more consultations.

Hoskins wouldn't say if the province will accept the recommendations of an expert panel that wants to exclude morbidly obese women and those over the age of 42 from funding for IVF.

Some patient advocates want the government to fund IVF for any woman who wants it, regardless of age and weight.

NDP health critic France Gelinas says the Liberals should make their decision based on scientific evidence, not on what will get them the most votes.

About two per cent of births in Ontario are a result of IVF, and Hoskins says the people will be able to get funding for the service before the end of this year.

The Liberals set up an advisory body to make sure high-quality practices are followed, including ensuring that only one embryo is used per treatment. So-called single-embryo transfer has been shown elsewhere to cut the number of twins, triplets and other multiple

ELECTION CAMPAIGN

Candidates: Harper dividing Canadians

Michael Woods
Metro | Ottawa

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is fostering division when he suggests that elite opinion is "completely divorced" from what ordinary people think, opposition candidates said Wednesday.

In an interview with Metro on Tuesday, Harper was asked about his past comments regarding "elites."

"It's not that elite opinion doesn't matter," he said. "Expert opinion always counts. But you cannot govern well, and you cannot govern properly, unless you understand the values and realities of ordinary Canadians."

As an example, he cited the government's law that allows them to strip people convicted of terrorism offences of their Canadian citizenship, if they have citizenship from another country.

He said the other parties' opposition to the law "is kind of elite political correctness on steroids."

However, local NDP and Liberal candidates said Harper is simply trying to divide Canadians with such remarks.

"Elite" is really anyone who disagrees with his ideological views," said Ottawa Centre Liberal candidate Catherine McKenna. "It could be the courts, the media, human rights organizations, often the legal community, or senior bureaucrats in the public service," she said.

Paul Dewar, the NDP incumbent in Ottawa Centre, said the Conservatives are trying to use the citizenship revocation law as a wedge issue.

He also said the Conservative government has often ignored or not sought the advice of public servants in creating certain laws.

"They just stovepipe it: they just go around the public service, they have their own point of view and it gets right into law ... The end result, often, is a court challenge, and the laws are thrown out," he said. "The public service, the Supreme Court, anyone who has any background knowledge in this case in law is considered an elite."

Carleton gives its side in TA grievance

Carleton University says it intends to correct "unclear language" in its collective agreement with teaching assistants that resulted in grievance being filed by the union.

CUPE 4600 announced Tuesday that the university would repay teaching assistants to compensate for raised tuition. The university says the amount is $400,000 in total, not $400,000 per semester as union CUPE 4600 estimated.

"Carleton was not ordered, but agreed as part of the settlement to revert to past practice in the interim," said media relations officer Steven Reid.

He said the agreement has erroneously resulted in many students getting a "bonus," not a rebate. "The university expects the issue to be addressed in the next round of bargaining," he said. The collective agreement with TAs expires August 2016.

Tory candidate a foodie at heart

Piccini once considered opening his own restaurant

Jenna Guilbeault
 Algonquin College

Its 5 a.m. and David Piccini is reaching to turn off his alarm clock — another 12-hour day of campaigning ahead. Before he makes his way to his office and focuses on a day of campaigning, he'll take his dog, Max, for a run somewhere in the Ottawa-Vanier riding.

The hustle and bustle of campaign season has left little time for Piccini to enjoy some of the things he loves most, such as being outdoors and exercising, but most importantly he's had to put his love for cooking and food on the back burner.

Many people don't know that Piccini is a foodie at heart.

"The running joke right now is that if I'm not on the campaign trail, I can be found at La Bottega in the ByWard Market grabbing a bite to eat," said Piccini.

And rightly so: La Bottega is a place that Piccini has held close to his heart since he was a student at the University of Ottawa several years ago.

"I cashed in my meal plan and decided I was going to cook all of my meals instead," said Piccini. "Shortly after that, I got a job at La Bottega."

Piccini inherited his passion for food and cooking from his Italian family, particularly his mother.

"My mom was a big influence in my cooking," said Piccini. "She was the one who taught me how to cook."

Piccini once won the Ottawa Foodie Challenge, and he even considered opening his own Italian restaurant.

"I was faced with a dilemma after I left the public service," said Piccini. "I had the choice to either go to Ed Fast's office, or ... open my own restaurant."

Although it's tough being on the campaign trail every day, Piccini says food and culture have played a big role in where he is today, both in politics and his everyday life.

"I've built a life in Ottawa that I'm very proud of," said Piccini.

"I'm hoping to be Ottawa-Vanier's newest member of Parliament with a flair for food."

Victim planned to leave soldier husband: Mother

MELISSA RICHMOND

Accused killer exaggerated his PTSD, court hears

Joe Lofaro
Metro | Ottawa

Four days before she was stabbed to death, Melissa Richmond told her mother she wanted to leave her PTSD-stricken soldier husband, who is now accused of first-degree murder in her death, court heard Wednesday.

The 28-year-old woman was found dead in a ditch behind a South Keys restaurant in July 2013 after her husband, warrant officer Howard Richmond, reported her missing to the OPP. Police say she had been stabbed multiple times.

The former soldier told the court he killed his wife, but his lawyers say he is not criminally responsible due to mental illness.

Howard's post-traumatic stress disorder was brought on by the "unspeakable horrors" he witnesses during tours in Afghanistan and other countries, the court heard at the beginning of the trial.

The illness took its toll on the marriage. Melissa used to be a "happy, very social" woman, her mother Millie Evans testified Wednesday, but she turned to anti-depressants in 2013.

Evans told the court that on July 20, 2013, Melissa arrived unannounced at her Petawawa home in tears.

The Richmonds were hit with financial woes after Howard bought a second home in Winchester, Ont., but neglected to do the necessary renovations on the first home to sell it, court heard.

"PTSD gave Howard an excuse to be lazy," Evans said.

Melissa wanted to leave, her mother said, but feared she would be in financial disarray

I work on a military base. I see guys with real PTSD.

if she went through with it.

"Her confidence was gone. She was fed up with everything."

The following morning, she went out to breakfast with her parents and she agreed to give the marriage one month to improve. That was the last day Evans saw her daughter.

Crown prosecutor Peter Napier said she was found with stab wounds to her head and neck.

In her testimony, Evans told the court she believed Howard wasn't being honest with police when they came to the house asking him about Melissa.

She told defence lawyer Jason Gilbert she also thought Howard exaggerated his illness — the crux of his defence.

Millie Evans, mother of Melissa Richmond (above) testified Wednesday her daughter wanted to leave her soldier husband, but was scared to for financial reasons. FACEBOOK

IN BRIEF

Thousands who bought used cars in May to get bill from Ontario tax man

About 6,500 Ontario residents who bought a used car in May will receive a letter from the Ministry of Finance seeking hundreds of dollars in unpaid sales tax.

The government says a third-party provider gave the wrong information on the wholesale value of used cars for almost the entire month of May, so buyers did not pay the appropriate amount of sales tax.

Finance Minister Charles Sousa says $2.4 million in retail sales tax was not collected on used cars and trucks sold across Ontario between May 1 and 27.

Sousa says it's unfortunate that the ministry has to send letters with assessment notices advising those affected of the additional tax they owe.

Officials say most will have to pay about $100 to $500 in sales tax, which the minister says is only fair to everyone else who purchased a used car and paid the proper amount of tax.

Beyoncé party, MonkeyJunk, whacky rap on weekend bill

Trevor Greenway
Metro | Ottawa

Babylon, can you handle this? DJs, can you handle this?

I'm pretty sure they can handle this.

The monthly Bey Bey All Night Dance Party is back on at Babylon this weekend and DJs Sacha Foster, Max Zimmerman and Jimmy C are ready with crates and crates, well, digital crates, of Beyoncé show-stoppers that will have all the Single Ladies on the dance floor, telling creeps to put a ring on it.

Expect dance-offs, sing-alongs and a whole lot of bumpin' and grinding as the three DJs spin classic and fresh new Beyoncé tunes, as well as "dance floor anthems every good party requires." The party starts at 10 p.m. at Babylon.

But dancing to Bey isn't the only thing on the musical docket this weekend. There are loads of other options to get your funk on. Here's a shortlist of parties worth checking out in the city and beyond.

Beau's Oktoberfest

B.C. indie rockers Yukon Blonde and Toronto indie pop group Alvays take over Vankleek Hill this weekend for the epic Beau's Oktoberfest. The beer celebration will feature over 50 local craft breweries as well as more than 15 live bands playing shows throughout the weekend. This is a beer fest where you can get a little crazy, so grab your lederhosen, plan to drink way too much and pass out on the lawn to some great music.

What: Beau's Oktoberfest w/

Where: Vankleek Hill

When: Oct. 2-3

Why go: What's better than beer and music? Chug-a-lug.

MonkeyJunk CD Release Party

Did you catch the moon turn red during the lunar eclipse last weekend? If you missed it, Ottawa blues-rock band MonkeyJunk has a surprise for you. The band is releasing its new album Moon Turn Red during a CD release party at the Rainbow Bistro this weekend and you're all invited to catch the rare sight. The new record boasts soul, funk and the occasional "goose bump inducing love song." Don't miss the eclipse twice in one month.

READY TO ENGAGE

Metro's coast-to-coast daily election series connects young, urban Canadians to the issues they care about

VOTER PROFILE

Name: Bailey Reid Age: 30 Riding: Ottawa Vanier
Her issues: Violence against women, women in leadership roles

Wanted: Focus on women's issues

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD
in Ottawa

One thing dominates Bailey Reid's politics: The inequality of the sexes.

"You can talk about representation in Parliament, you can talk about child care, you can talk about violence against women, but I think that it does need that deeper analysis to show these are all results of women not being equal in Canada," she says.

Reid called Stephen Harper "the most absent" from the discussion. Neither he nor his status of women minister participated in the recent leader event devoted to women's issues — which touched on child care, violence against women, and women in leadership roles.

While NDP's Thomas Mulcair and Liberal's Justin Trudeau participated, Reid found those leader's analyses missed that point. No leader has been identifying inequality as the root cause, nor underlining the ludicrousness of segregating key issues for half the voting public under the ill-fitting "women's issues" banner — with the exception of Elizabeth May.

"Part of me wants to vote Green because I'm sick of (Elizabeth May) being ignored," Reid says. The Green leader was barred from the debates on the economy and on foreign policy, and Reid seems incredulous that a feminist reading of economic policy was missing from the other leaders' comments.

"It would be nice to see a woman taken seriously, and it does feel very, pat pat on the head, 'That's cute Miss May, but you can't come.'"

But Reid won't be voting Green, because her local candidate doesn't have good odds.

The 30-year-old's riding, Ottawa Vanier, is staunchly Liberal, and likely to remain so. Reid says her natural political home has been the Liberal Party, so she's likely voting that way again on Oct. 19. But she admits to some waffling. She likes the NDP's strategies on violence against women and national child-care plans.

Justin Trudeau's opaque comments that misogyny is fuelled by "certain kinds of music" and absent fathers certainly didn't impress Reid. "I wish he had a really good gender adviser," she quips. But the Liberals' promise to bring gender equity to cabinet is promising, she says, and so too the promise of a missing and murdered indigenous women inquiry. Trudeau is clearly willing to talk about inequality and sexism, she adds.

And that's the least that Reid is hoping for in this election: A prime minister willing to start talking more about women.

Rosemary Westwood is travelling across the country talking to young voters. She'll be in Toronto on Thursday.

'Fastest-growing industry' ignored

Tech industry is accusing leaders of poor planning

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

Federal leaders must show concrete plans on how technology will feature into their vision of the country, a local tech company has said.

Just days after founders of Lighthouse Labs wrote to Stephen Harper, Justin Trudeau and Thomas Mulcair expressing the tech community's disappointment over the lack of discussion on how to boost the country's economy through technology, Liberals responded swiftly.

Justin Trudeau announced Tuesday in Winnipeg a $900-million commitment to advance tech innovations and startup incubators.

"That's what we've been looking for from every leader," said Jeremy Shaki, co-founder of the web and mobile software development company. He described Trudeau's move as "phenomenal" but was quick to add sustainability is key.

"I'm not just asking for them to throw money everywhere, but specifically where does tech fit into their plans?" he said.

In the letter, the group had accused leaders of completely ignoring the technology industry in their discussions, and only focusing on short-term things "just to help them win certain votes, overlooking the fastest growing industry in North America."

Shaki remained critical of the leaders' commitment to transform the country's education sector by incorporating technology in the system.

"It's a shame. How are we voting on people when we have absolutely no idea how they'll be approaching these critical issues?" he said.

Groups in the tech industry have done "a phenomenal job" without much support from the government, and it's time leaders commit to promoting technological innovations, he said.

Lighthouse Labs believes most of tomorrow's job markets will require basic levels of web design and coding. The company has taken its trainings throughout the country, helping a total of its 300 graduates to land jobs with tech companies. Its HTML500 summer series have helped over 2,500 young Canadians learn basic skills in coding for free.

"Coding as a tool is so much like math," said Shaki, adding Canada should emulate nations like the U.K. and introduce coding classes in elementary and high schools, making it a mandatory subject.

"Even if you don't become a developer, knowing to code will help you find creative, logical and critical solutions."

There needs to be a top-down approach, or at least a conversation from the top about how to grow this industry, he said.

The technology industry has been completely ignored through all debates.

CARETAKER CONVENTION

Pact ignores protocol that limits activities during election

The Conservatives are conducting negotiations toward a massive 12-country trade deal — that could well prove to be their campaign centrepiece — in secret in the middle of an election, the Liberals and NDP charged Wednesday.

As Justin Trudeau unveiled the Liberal health-care policy plank, one of the last remaining pieces of his party's platform, and NDP Leader Tom Mulcair promised to establish a parliamentary science officer to advise his would-be government, the Conservatives were answering awkward questions about the Trans-Pacific Partnership, which could be announced, in some form, as early as Friday. Joe Oliver, in a rare national campaign appearance, defended the government's right to conduct official business during the election period.

suggestions that the government's continued pursuit of the TPP is a violation of the so-called "caretaker convention," which is supposed to limit government activity during an election period.

"There is a protocol in place and we of course consult with the Privy Council on these issues," Oliver said.

"When there's a matter of importance or urgency for the government to deal with in the national interest then it's appropriate for us to do that. And this is certainly one of those cases."

The convention also stipulates that governing parties are expected to consult opposition parties on matters that could end up tying the hands of future governments.

Trudeau flat out said he had "not been approached by anyone in government on the Trans-Pacific Partnership."

But what we need to know is that our government is negotiating in a way that is going to enhance Canadian opportunities and growth while protecting our interests."

Trade Minister Ed Fast is in Atlanta for a renewed round of negotiations, and speculation is rampant that an agreement in principle could emerge by the end of the week.

Mulcair said he is "very worried" about what Prime Minister Stephen Harper is willing to put on the table.

"I don't trust Stephen Harper as a negotiator," he said in Iqaluit. "He's not good at it. He has an ideological bent that means he doesn't care about what happens here at home. ... We've been asking the prime minister to defend our supply management system in its entirety and we'll accept nothing less."

Former Quebec lieutenant-governor sentenced to 18-month jail term

Calling her behaviour "highly reprehensible" and part of a "culture of deceit," a judge sentenced former Quebec lieutenant-governor Lise Thibault to 18 months in prison on Wednesday.

The sentence was handed down six years after Thibault, now 76, was charged with fraud and breach of trust.

The Queen's former representative left the courtroom in handcuffs in her wheelchair and was then incarcerated.

Thibault was charged two years after a 2007 report by the federal and provincial auditors general revealed she claimed more than $700,000 in improper expenses when she held the vice-regal post between 1997 and 2007.

Her trial heard the money was spent on gifts, trips, parties, meals and skiing and golf lessons.

Thibault was ordered to reimburse $200,000 to Ottawa and $100,000 to Quebec. THE CANADIAN PRESS

AIR TRAVEL

Stop separating families: Minister

Canada's transport minister quietly wrote to the heads of every major airline in the country earlier this year in an effort to stamp out a practice where parents were being seated separately from their children on flights.

In the March letter, Lisa Raitt called the issue one "where logic should prevail" and encouraged the airlines to ensure parents were seated with their young children whenever possible.

She asked airlines to come up with some way to eliminate such incidents, provide "greater predictability" to parents and "minimize the challenges that parents face when they embark on air travel with children."

A briefing note accompanying the letter suggests the missive wasn't intended to signal that the federal government was going to legislate an end to the practice by airlines, but to promote what Raitt's officials called "an industry-led solution."

Still, Transport Canada officials wrote in the briefing note that they were "exploring opportunities to address this issue and input from air carriers would be useful in that regard."

There are no federal rules requiring parents to be seated next to their children on flights, nor is it a guarantee under airline policy that a parent or guardian will automatically get a seat next to children under age 12.

The Canadian Transport Agency ruled late last year that ticketing rules that don't guarantee adjoining seats for parents and their children were neither unreasonable nor discriminatory.

Pope tells Davis: 'Stay strong'

Secret meeting confirmed by Vatican baffles LGBT activists

Defiant Kentucky clerk Kim Davis met briefly with Pope Francis during his historic U.S. visit, an encounter she said validates her crusade against gay marriage.

"He held out his hand to her and she grasped his hand," her attorney, Mat Staver, told The Associated Press. "He asked her to pray for him and she said she would; she asked the pope to pray for her, and he said he would."

The Vatican essentially confirmed the meeting: The Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, given the opportunity to deny it took place, declined to do so and said merely that he would have no comment. The Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, said the meeting was private and that no photos would be released.

bassy in Washington, Staver said. He would not say who initiated the meeting with the pope or how it came to be, citing a desire to be "deferential to the Vatican."

They chose to keep the meeting a secret while the pope was in the county, to avoid overshadowing his visit with the controversy that follows Davis, Staver said.

Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, Kentucky, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, also referred questions back to the Vatican.

"It was really very humbling to even think that he would want to meet me or know me," Davis told ABC News. "Just knowing that the pope is on track with what we're doing and agreeing, you know, it kind of validates everything."

For some, the pope's decision to meet with a figure as divisive as Davis sullied the legacy of his celebratory visit.

DignityUSA, an advocacy group for gay and lesbian Catholics, called their meeting "deeply disappointing" and said it could transform the public perception of the trip "from a largely successful pastoral visit to the endorsement of an exclusionary political agenda."

"That Pope Francis met privately in Washington, D.C. with Kim Davis throws a wet blanket on the good will that the pontiff had garnered during his U.S. visit last week," wrote Francis DeBernardo, the executive director of New Ways Ministry, another Catholic organization that advocates for gay rights.

ISIL INTERVENTION

Russia calls for unified combat

Russia followed its launch of airstrikes in Syria with a call on Wednesday for the world to unite in the fight against terrorist groups, and Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov told foreign ministers of world powers that his country was circulating a draft UN Security Council resolution to help make it happen.

Secretary of State John Kerry responded by announcing that the United States is prepared to welcome Russia actions in Syria if they are directed at the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) group and al-Qaida, and promising that the U.S.-led coalition fighting ISIL in Syria would "dramatically accelerate our efforts."

Syrian Foreign Minister Walid al-Moallem told the council that his country strongly endorses Russia's latest moves and called airstrikes in Syria that aren't coordinated with his government a "blatant contravention" of international law. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. Navy seizes ship hauling illicit arms

A ship carrying illicit arms believed to be from Iran was intercepted last week off the southern Arabian Peninsula by a member of a U.S.-backed naval coalition and was not registered with any country, the U.S. Navy said Wednesday.

The description of the ship's seizure conflicted in some instances with an earlier account provided by a separate Saudi-led coalition battling Yemen's Shiite rebels, which claimed in a statement carried by the state-run Saudi Press Agency that it had foiled the smuggling attempt.

The Saudi coalition alleged that Iran was using the vessel to ship arms to the rebels, charges denied by Tehran.

Muslim farmer beaten to death over beef-eating rumour

Indian police arrested eight people and were searching for two more Wednesday after villagers allegedly beat a Muslim farmer to death and severely injured his son upon hearing rumours that the family was eating beef — a taboo for many among India's majority Hindu population.

The mob of about 60 Hindus became incensed when a temple announced that the family had been slaughtering cows and storing the beef in their house in Bisara, a village about 45 kilometres southeast of the Indian capital of New Delhi, said District Magistrate Nagendra Pratap Singh.

He said the mob dragged 52-year-old Mohammad Akhlaq and his son from their home Monday night and beat them with sticks and bricks. Akhlaq was declared dead at a nearby hospital, while his son was being treated for serious injuries.

Indian states, the slaughtering of cows and selling of beef are either restricted or banned.

For Hindus, cows are worshipped as sacred, and many of the animals are often seen wandering unchecked around big-city neighbourhoods and on highways during rush hour.

Opposition lawmaker Shashi Tharoor said in a Twitter message that the "horrific killing shows this meat bigotry has gone out of control," and that Indians should be "free to eat what they want."

McDonald's Canada CEO John Betts says lining up to pay for the same old burger will soon be a thing of the past.

The company is overhauling the way it does business, adding self-service kiosks and bringing table service and dedicated wait staff to its restaurants.

"We are kicking off a bold plan to transform what guests experience when they visit McDonald's restaurants across Canada," says Betts. "We want our guests to walk in and be wowed by an experience that's modern and personalized, but still the McDonald's they know and love."

The new kiosks will allow customers to personalize their orders as McDonald's adds a premium burger to the menu with nearly 30 different options including five types of cheese, 12 toppings, two buns, a lettuce wrap and nine sauces.

The company says the plan will include the creation of 15,000 new jobs across the country as it adds employees who will greet customers and guide them through the ordering process.

Betts says most of the 1,400 McDonald's restaurants in Canada will be changed to the new ordering format by 2017.

CHANTAL HÉBERT: ON THE NDP IN QUEBEC

“A repeat orange wave is indefinitely on hold, and things could actually get worse for the New Democrats.”

Less than a month ago, the NDP was poised to sweep Quebec for the second federal election in a row. Now, a repeat orange wave is indefinitely on hold and things could actually get worse for the New Democrats.

An Abacus poll published on Monday showed the NDP still leading the pack in Quebec, but down 17 points from a mid-September sounding. Other polls have reported a smaller drop but all concur on the trend. As the election gets nearer, Thomas Mulcair's party is falling from grace in Quebec.

There is no doubt the controversy over whether Muslim women should be required to unveil their faces to take the oath of citizenship is acting as a catalyst for the drop in party fortunes.

An overwhelming majority of Quebecers support a niqab ban. The NDP opposes it.

But the New Democrat campaign had started to lose steam before the niqab appeared on the radar, for reasons more fundamental than the pent-up passions unleashed by a Conservative play on the identity front.

From a Quebec perspective the NDP's platform is an underwhelming one.

With the provincial government's cost-cutting crusade already taking a toll on its social programs, it is hard to think of a NDP commitment more likely to miss the mark with Quebec's progressive voters than the come-hell-or-high-water determination to balance the federal books. If anything, many Quebecers are suffering from an overdose of government-imposed austerity.

From a Quebec perspective, the NDP platform is an underwhelming one.

The promise of a national universal child-care system has short legs in a province that has set up the most comprehensive program in the country on its own.

Mulcair's call to open the Constitution to abolish the Senate is similarly of limited appeal.

For one, it pits the NDP leader against Quebec Premier Philippe Couillard. He believes the Senate should be reformed, not abolished. And then there is the matter of Quebec's own long-standing constitutional agenda. Couillard insists that a round on the Senate would have to include it as well.

On that score, Mulcair did not help his cause when he told Radio-Canada two weeks ago that the premier's stance was just part of the game.

Going into the campaign, the NDP leader's Quebec trump card was the sense that he was best placed to beat Stephen Harper. More so than any federal NDP initiative, it was the party's victory in Alberta last spring that cemented Mulcair's formidable pre-campaign lead in his home province. Now the fact that the party is running third in the rest of Canada is sinking in.

At this juncture, the question on everyone's mind is whether the NDP has hit bottom in Quebec or whether it could continue to lose support between now and the vote.

The short answer is that the New Democrats have no fixed floor of support in Quebec. It has yet to build a solid capital of loyalty.

Mario Dumont, the former leader of the Action Démocratique party, can testify to the perils of that.

In 2007, he came within seven seats of leading his young party to a minority victory against Jean Charest's provincial Liberals. But over the year and a half that followed, Quebecers were unimpressed by the ADQ's performance in official opposition. In an election held 20 short months after he had landed on the doorstep of provincial power, Dumont was left with only seven seats.

If the NDP is to avoid going in a similar tailspin, time is increasingly of the essence. Over the next four days, Mulcair will have his last best two opportunities to reverse the tide.

On Friday, he will take part in the last French-language debate of the campaign on the Quebec private network TVA. Then, on Sunday, Mulcair will appear on Tout le monde en parle, Radio-Canada's popular television talk show. Both events are expected to draw large audiences.

But Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau is going into the debate on more of a roll than he is, and the niqab issue that has been the NDP's nemesis in Quebec is bound to come up on both nights.

Mulcair is down two strikes. He desperately needs a home run if he wants his party to still be the Quebec home team after Oct. 19.

Want to close the pay gap? Women need to talk more about money

Renee Sylvestre-Williams
For Metro

Let's talk about something we rarely talk about: salaries.

Two incidents stick out in my memory regarding salary negotiations.

The first was when I negotiating my first salary increase. I was at an online media company and had recently taken on new responsibilities and hit some pretty impressive, measurable targets. I wanted a raise because I thought I deserved one. I made an appointment to speak with my boss.

After 30 excruciating minutes, I got a two-per-cent increase with a condescending, "You should be grateful for that." I handed in my notice three months later. I couldn't work for someone who tried to make me feel bad about asking for more money.

Canadian women make significantly lower wages than men for many reasons: A shortfall of women in senior positions, a widespread fear of asking for more and a dearth of conversations at the grassroots level.

We can help each other understand what we're worth.

To close the gap, we need to talk about money. We should talk about which companies provide the best work-life balance, which have the best perks and which offer the best pay.

Yet how many of us negotiate our salaries, or have told our friends what we make? Most don't.

According to a report released in May by the WEB Alliance of Women's Business Networks, Canadian women make an average of $8,000 per year less than men in equivalent positions.

By discussing our salaries with our friends, we can tear down the systemic barriers that stop us from earning the same pay as men. We can help each other understand what we're worth.

And that's how you will get the support you're going to need when, not if, you ask for more money.

The second incident was when I was doing the hiring. We offered the candidate the full salary as budgeted. She asked for more. I told her we had offered her as much as we could afford. And I was so happy that she asked.

So, we need to have this conversation. I'll start. I freelance, so my income depends on how much work I get — but in my best year, I make close to $70,000.

Now it's your turn.

Renee Sylvestre-Williams is the publisher of the Ethnic Aisle, a digital magazine about race and ethnicity in Toronto.

THE MICROTREND: The prolific province

Ah, Saskatchewan. Wholesome, flat Saskatchewan. The province of grain growers, Saskatoon berries, and ... babies? Yes. So many babies. Saskatchewan is bucking the Canada-wide trend towards an aging population. The children from this fertile land still outnumber seniors. According to a new Statistics Canada report, 19 per cent of Saskatchewanians are under 15 years old, compared to a 16 per cent average in Canada. Just 14.6 per cent of the population is 65 or older, versus 16.1 per cent nationwide. Why? In part, it's a growing population of indigenous people, who tend to skew younger and have higher fertility rates. And as for the dearth of old folks — many are retiring elsewhere to escape those cold prairie nights.

AN IDEALIST IS A PERSON WHO HELPS OTHER PEOPLE BE PROSPEROUS.

BOOKS

Jojo Moyes releases the sequel to 2013 bestseller

A book that wins millions of fans is a tough act to follow. And British novelist Jojo Moyes was all too aware of this as she wrote After You, the sequel to her New York Times bestseller Me Before You.

"It has been the most nerve-racking book that I've ever written," she said in an interview. "So many people feel so invested in these characters."

To say that Me Before You was an unexpected hit is an understatement.

When Moyes decided to write a romance between a caregiver and her depressed, paralyzed patient, her publisher was lukewarm.

"In hindsight I can understand why," Moyes says with a laugh. "A quadriplegic man who wants to die doesn't sound like the most compelling piece of fiction."

Except, of course, it was. Me Before You introduced the world to Louisa Clark, an endearing English everywoman. Her predictable, small-town life was blown open when she went to work for neighbour Will Traynor, a London hotshot who had been paralyzed by a traffic accident.

Their bond was intimate and powerful, but ultimately not enough to save Will from despair — and in the final pages they made the journey to Dignitas in Switzerland to end his life.

Hardly your average chick-lit plot, but then Moyes has never been your average chick-lit author.

The former journalist distinguished herself early on from the cocktail-sipping masses.

Known for her wit, humour and cultural savvy, Moyes writes against the grain, sidestepping the familiar tropes of glamorous jobs and syrupy soul mates.

"I have an absolute horror of being seen as somebody who just writes the handsome man who came in and swept her off her feet and everyone lives happily ever after," she says. "I'm far more interested in the messy stuff."

Me Before You catapulted Moyes out of this pink ghetto and made her a bona fide literary star.

She was reviewed by serious publications and tapped by MGM to write the screenplay for Me Before You, due to hit theatres in 2016.

Most significantly for Moyes — who's had two family members require around-the-clock care — it placed her at the centre of the assisted suicide debate.

"I don't think you can hang onto a moral absolute if you are faced with the reality of that situation," she says. "The only people who know all the answers are the people who've never been faced with the questions."

Moyes began to receive daily emails from readers around the world.

"The ones that really stand out to me are from the caregivers," she says. "They get me into the same head space as Lou, which is: you don't see the disability, you see the person that you love."

The character Lou was a lightning rod for all this emotion and people clamoured to know what happened to her. Moyes found herself wondering too.

And so After You, out this week, resurrects her. The novel finds Lou holed up in London, reverting back to her old ways, leading a claustrophobic life and tending bar at an Irish-themed airport pub.

"To be part of someone taking their own life would be such a huge event," says Moyes. "I needed to show that there was a cost to those sorts of decisions."

Lou belongs to a comical church basement grief group, The Moving On Circle, but is otherwise alone (until a surprise plot twist blows open her world once again).

"When I put myself in her shoes, I thought: What would you do? You would just be leading this very solitary existence. Because how on Earth could you justify what you've been part of to people who don't know the whole story?"

"That is one of the things that intrigues me and is probably a theme that I'll return to again and again," she says.

"How things look from the outside are not necessarily how they are."

A modern, slightly dystopian satire

MARGARET ATWOOD

Latest effort 'a dark, romantic comedy'

Margaret Atwood is clearly having fun.

Her latest book The Heart Goes Last, is a romp of a book featuring sex robots, Elvis impersonators and blue teddy bears that are sure to give you nightmares for weeks to come.

And she's having a blast on Twitter, of which she's a prodigious user — she's tweeted pics of herself in Vegas on the arm of a Captain Jack impersonator.

"That's the fun bit" about social media, she says, in an interview in the airy downtown Toronto offices of Penguin Random House Canada where we're talking about the book as well as the possibilities of technology.

The Heart Goes Last began on Byliner, a "boutique" website that published literary authors online. Four episodes of the then-titled Positron series went up, but Byliner went down and the rights for the story reverted to Atwood and her Byliner editor Amy Grace Loyd suggested it become a book.

She calls it "a dark romantic comedy in which there are no heroes." But as with anything Atwood, satire ensures that even when you are having fun, you feel slightly uncomfortable.

The Heart Goes Last is a comment on current politics — on unbridled capitalism, on the trend to the conservative right, on the tough economic times being faced by young people whose employment is precarious and whose dreams of a stable job, home and family are getting tougher to attain.

It's a thoroughly modern story, yet Atwood hearkens back to Victorian times and that era's novels of manners and the 1950s. She's long had a keen interest in the history and use of prisons — what should they be used for: punishment, to pay off a debt, to reform people, to make them penitent?

"We really need to think about that because right now we have an overstuffed prison system that's full of people who probably shouldn't be there at all and they're learning to be criminals."

This gives you a clue to what she really seems to be getting at in the latest of her more than 40 books of poetry, non-fiction and fiction.

Margaret Atwood says there are no heroes in The Heart Goes Last. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

So the idea is: why not use the prison for good: Let's give everybody a job and a roof over their heads. That gives birth in the book to the Positron Project — those who sign up live happily in the town of Consilience; the only trick is they have to live in a prison every second month.

"This is a nice utopian scheme, it is a time-sharing scheme in which you play the prisoner one month and you get to be a citizen the next month."

The world of Consilience is filled with echoes of the '50s. "They structure it to be a very calming situation."

It doesn't quite work out as a panacea to society's ills, but it does provide Atwood a way of looking at human nature — both of those who are running the joint and those who have signed up to stay inside.

While she is adamant there will be no spoilers, Atwood will say "I do think absolute power corrupts, and I do think absolute temptation is very tempting if you think that nobody has oversight or can catch you doing whatever it is you're doing."

While it might seem rather hopeless, Atwood doesn't see it that way. She's compassionate, but she doesn't let us dodge personal responsibility.

Which brings us back to the sex robots.

"With each of the technologies we develop there's a good side, a dark side and a stupid side which are the effects we hadn't anticipated. It's a Pandora's box."

"We've discovered a lot of things that could've destroyed us and we've pulled back in time," she notes.

The technology is neutral, she says. It's what we humans do with it that counts.

GOSSIP BREAKUPS

Long time coming

Amanda Seyfried has apparently kicked boyfriend Justin Long to the curb after two years of dating, according to Us Weekly. "It happened a few weeks ago," a source explains. "He's really heartbroken." Earlier this year in an interview with Vogue, Seyfried both revealed how she initially fell for Long — on Instagram, if you can believe it — and hinted that things might not be working out so well. "I thought something he said was really funny. It was a beautiful picture of a snail, and the caption said, 'F—ing MOOOOOOOOOVE.' It made me laugh out loud, so I texted him," she explained. But: "Making movies is two solid months of 12-, 14-hour

TMZ got its hands on the filing this week in which Green valiantly checks the "spousal or domestic partner support" box, indicating that Fox is the bigger earner of the two. Which makes sense since Green has apparently been battling vertigo and not working much since he and Fox were in a car accident last December. Bummer, man. NED EHRBAR/METRO

They said it was just a phase, and apparently they were right. Ben Affleck has reportedly called off his post-divorce dalliance with his and Jennifer Garner's former nanny, Christine Ouzounian — to the rejoice of spell-checkers everywhere. "He cut ties with her recently," a source tells Life & Style. "He told Christine he couldn't handle another relationship when things were still so painful and raw between him and Jen."

Sure, that. And maybe also because you shouldn't date the nanny? I mean, I understand the siren song of convenience and all, but come on. "He had fun with (her), but it wasn't love," the source adds, wistfully. You know who was totally surprised by this development? Ouzounian herself, apparently, who was "blindsided" by the breakup. "When Ben finally told Christine things were over, she was pissed," another source says. "Christine is very upset and says Ben should be worried. In her mind, this is far from over." Oh, delightful.

Clooney and Coens reunite for film's 15th anniversary

George Clooney joined the Coen brothers, and co-stars Tim Blake Nelson and John Turturro at a special 15th-anniversary screening of O Brother, Where Art Thou? at the New York Film Festival.

Clooney remembered he had just left a successful TV series when the opportunity came up. "I was an actor coming off of ER," said Clooney Tuesday night after arriving at the event. "The Coen brothers said, 'Do you want to do a movie?' And I was like, 'Yeah, I'll do a movie with the Coen brothers, are you kidding? They do great films.' I just couldn't believe my luck."

Clooney admits he felt a geographic familiarity with the characters. "I grew up in Kentucky and I kind of know these guys a little bit," he said.

Ethan Coen and his brother, Joel, wrote the screenplay, based on The Odyssey by Homer, and directed it. While the film was critically acclaimed and enjoyed moderate success, the soundtrack was a smash hit. Produced by T Bone Burnett, it was made up of artists from the American roots music scene that included Alison Krauss, Ralph Stanley, Gillian Welch and Emmylou Harris. It sold 8 million albums and earned a Grammy Award for album of the year.

Coen loved how the music and the film unexpectedly came together, but also discussed the tricky marriage of the two.

One of biggest hits from the film, I Am a Man of Constant Sorrow, sung by the fictional Soggy Bottom Boys, which included Clooney, Blake-Nelson and Turturro, does not include Clooney's voice. It was actually bluegrass musician Dan Tyminski.

Clooney told reporters he originally recorded the track, but after he came out of the recording booth, producer Burnett just put his head down and looked away. Clooney said he knew at that moment his voice was getting dubbed.

VEHICULAR MANSLAUGHTER

Jenner off the hook

Prosecutors declined to charge Caitlyn Jenner on Wednesday in a California car crash that killed another driver, citing insufficient evidence to support a case.

Authorities said Jenner was towing an off-road vehicle on a trailer behind a Cadillac Escalade on Feb. 7 when she crashed into two cars, pushing one into oncoming traffic. Driver Kim Howe died when her Lexus was hit by a Hummer in Malibu.

"We believed from the start that a thorough and objective investigation would clear Caitlyn of any criminal wrongdoing," said Blair Berk, Jenner's attorney. "We are heartened the district attorney has agreed that even a misdemeanor charge would be inappropriate. A traffic accident, however devastating and heartbreaking when a life is lost, is not necessarily a criminal matter."

The accident occurred before Jenner announced she is transgender and transitioned into her new identity as Caitlyn. Sheriff's investigators previously determined that Jenner, 65, was travelling at an unsafe speed for the road conditions at the time and there was enough evidence to support a vehicular manslaughter charge.

The case was then referred to the district attorney's major crimes division. A prosecutor wrote in a one-page sheet declining to file charges that Jenner was travelling slightly below the posted speed limit and began braking less than two seconds before the crash.

To prove misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter, prosecutors would have had to show Jenner was negligent and had violated a basic speed law.

CONDO TRENDS

A look at historic home renos and condo conversions around Canada

Duncan McAllister
For Metro Canada

In a popular real estate trend, former warehouses, churches and industrial buildings all across Canada are being converted into lofts and condos. In addition, a number of new condo builds are incorporating a historic podium or heritage facade, serving as the base of a brand-new tower rising above.

When done right, these venerable residential transformations make for a unique and classical living space, with vaulted ceilings, sash windows, limestone features, exposed brick and period lighting fixtures — exquisite details that you just don't find in contemporary buildings.

The former Eden House at 147 East Gate in Winnipeg was built in 1885, and has a lot of the original character to it. The century home is currently up for sale. "It's got that grand old home feel; it still has the servants' quarters," says real estate agent Tannis Engel.

Originally the Arthur F. Eden house, it's the oldest standing house in Armstrong Point. "It's right in the heart of downtown in a little pocket community along the river," says Tannis. The family has owned the property for 37 years. "It's true to its original size and shape and she

In Edmonton, Chandos Construction Ltd. jacked-up a five-storey heritage building, previously used as a warehouse, and built a parkade under it. No small feat under any circumstances. The Phillips Lofts at 10169-104th St. is a heritage condo conversion in Edmonton's Warehouse District.

The existing structure of the 90,000-sq.-ft. building consisted of rough-sawn timbers with a post-and-beam configuration. The Chandos design team incorporated these features to maintain the heritage

The mistakes homebuyers make

COSTLY

First-time homebuyers can end up investing in a nightmare

Analise Smart
For Metro

Buying a home can be one of the most rewarding decisions you'll make, but make the wrong moves, and you could end up investing in a costly nightmare.

Mike Stewart, a Vancouver-based Realtor®, shares some of the most common mistakes he sees with first-time home buyers.

Not speaking to a lender or mortgage broker first

Stewart says most people wouldn't go shopping without knowing how much money they have in the bank or available credit on their cards, and the same should apply when shopping for a home.

"A lot of first-time homebuyers get out there and say, 'OK, great, my mom says I can get a loan for $700,000. Let's go find a place," he says. "And then they spend all their time, all their family's time, all their Realtor's time, get an accepted offer on a property and after a huge big hassle it turns out they can only afford $200,000."

Talking to a mortgage broker first, he says, will let you know exactly what you're working with.

Not hiring a Realtor

Stewart says you should always get a Realtor, who will prevent you from making mistakes like overpaying. "Hiring someone who knows what they're doing and you don't have to pay them — that's worth its weight in gold," he says.

You should also make sure to research the people you will be hiring beforehand.

"The Internet is the most powerful system for doing due diligence on professionals that exists," he says. "If there's nothing on this person, they're probably not very experienced. If there's tons of stuff on this person and it's all positive, chances are you want to work with them. If it says Joe Realtor is a scumbag and he ripped me off, then you don't want to work with that person."

Not getting a home inspection

Getting a home inspection saves you from learning unpleasant truths about your home later. Stewart lists some of the possibilities that may await you should you not heed this advice.

"You buy a house with asbestos, you buy a house with mold, you buy a house that's been renovated without permits and you can't get insurance on it — if you can't get insurance, you can't get a mortgage," he says. "Basically, getting a home inspection will help you avoid buying a money pit."

Flipping versus buying

Real Estate is one of the smartest investments you can make. The long-term trend in Canada is that the value is almost certain to go up — but if you are looking for a quick turnaround, flipping may or may not be right for you.

John Stassen, a designer, contractor, renovator and former host of HGTV's The Big Flip, says buying with the intention of flipping versus a longer-term investment will call for different strategies.

When choosing a home to live in, buyers might be OK with paying a little above market value and won't want major renovations as it is just too disruptive.

Those looking to flip, however, are playing by a different set of rules.

"You're looking for the worst home on the best street, and you can't be afraid of walking away from a deal if the competition drives the price up beyond what your calculations show you can purchase it for," he says. "The most common mistakes made are underestimating the cost of the renovations and overpaying for a property you have chosen as a flip."

Stassen says you also need

You need a lot of working capital for flips. SHUTTERSTOCK

a lot more working capital for flips, with projects he's worked on ranging from under $30,000 to more than $180,000.

"You will definitely need access to extra cash and/or reasonable rate financing when taking on a project," he says. "While flipping you can go months before seeing your profit on a project and you can't be left struggling to pay your own bills."

Choosing the "right" neighbourhood also becomes more important.

"The joke we had was if the area already has a Starbucks in it you'd missed the boat for flip-

FROM A BROKER

Lina Porretta, a broker with Forest Hill Real Estate in Toronto, says getting financing to flip a home is not as easy as it would be for your home. "Getting a mortgage for a second property isn't as easy as borrowing for your primary residence," she says. "If you aren't able to secure traditional financing, third party lenders charge premiums." Your taxes may also be different, so Porretta advises speaking with your accountant to understand the tax implications of your purchase.

ping," he says. "The key is to find areas that are just beginning to gain popularity."

Stassen says combining traditional home purchasing and flipping can be a great strategy. "If you can afford it the approach of buying a property while residing elsewhere, renovating it then moving in for a year or more before selling can provide the best of both worlds," he says.

ANALISE SMART/FOR METRO

THE HOOD

How to pick the right location

Location, location, location is the home-hunter's maxim, so how to choose?

Real estate professionals say that what makes something the "right" neighbourhood is as much a personal preference as it is an intrinsic rule.

Ramin Khaze, a sales representative with Forest Hill Real Estate Inc. Brokerage in Toronto, says his advice for choosing the right neighbourhood is the same he would give about choosing the right house.

"They need to keep in mind that there is no perfect neighbourhood just like there is no perfect house," he says. "No matter where you end up you will have to sacrifice something, whether it is the commute to work or a school district for kids, or access to public transportation."

Khaze says homebuyers need to make a list of what they want, with considerations that include everything from budget, to whether they want a new home or an older one, right down to how many bathrooms are needed and what kind of finishes are desired.

Ideally you want to strike the right balance between the home you want and the neighbourhood you want, Khaze says.

"Some clients prefer to sacrifice size and living space to be more in the action Other clients would compromise the neighbourhood to have a house where they get what they want in size, bedrooms, land and such," he says. "It goes back what is important to you in a neighbourhood versus what is important to you in a house."

As for concerns about weighing budget against the desire to live in a particular neighbourhood, Khaze says buyers shouldn't stretch themselves too thin.

"I always tell clients to think with their heads and not their hearts," he says. "They may fall in love with a neighbourhood, but they may not end up enjoying it because they have stretched themselves so much financially they can't go out and enjoy it. You want to be comfortable in your new home and new area." ANALISE SMART/FOR METRO

The Blue Jays clinched the AL East — their first division title in 22 years — on Wednesday. PATRICK SMITH/GETTY IMAGES

Jays have their banner day

+ TIMELINE

The Blue Jays' journey to winning the division title began a year ago. Here are some pivotal moments within that span:

Nov. 1, 2014 — The Jays trade longtime first baseman/designated hitter Adam Lind to the Milwaukee Brewers for right-handed pitcher Marco Estrada.

Nov. 18, 2014 — The Jays sign three-time all-star catcher Russell Martin, a native of Toronto.

Nov. 28, 2014 — The Jays trade Canadian third baseman Brett Lawrie and prospects to the Oakland Athletics for third baseman Josh Donaldson.

July 12, 2015 — Toronto goes into the all-star break 45-46.

July 28, 2015 — In a blockbuster deal with the Colorado Rockies, the Blue Jays get shortstop Troy Tulowitzki and reliever LaTroy Hawkins.

July 30, 2015 — The trade bonanza hits its apex as the Blue Jays acquire pending free-agent ace David Price from the Detroit Tigers.

Aug. 12, 2015 — The 10th victory of an 11-game winning streak, coupled with a Yankees loss, puts the Blue Jays in first place in the AL East by a half-game.

Aug. 23, 2015 — A rout of the Angels wraps up a three-game sweep in Anaheim as the Blue Jays get back into first place.

MLB

Toronto earns berth in ALDS

It wasn't the storybook scene anyone would have dreamt up: a half-empty road stadium in the first half of a doubleheader on a Wednesday afternoon.

It was a moment 22 years in the making for the Toronto Blue Jays franchise and almost a year in the making for the 2015 team. In front of an intimate crowd at Camden Yards wearing more blue than orange, the Blue Jays routed the Baltimore Orioles 15-2 to clinch the American League East.

The pennant is Toronto's first since 1993, when it won its second of back-to-back World Series titles. It assures the Blue Jays a spot in the five-game AL Division Series rather than the uncertainty of a one-game wild-card playoff.

"It's been a really long time since this city has been to the playoffs, so to do it for the City of Toronto and to do it with this group of guys, it's been a dream come true," said pitcher Marcus Stroman, who earned the win.

In late July, any kind of post-season appearance would have been welcomed, before general manager Alex Anthopoulos went all-in, trading for shortstop Troy Tulowitzki, ace David Price, outfielder Ben Revere and relievers LaTroy Hawkins and Mark Lowe at the deadline.

IN BALTIMORE

Those moves worked like a charm, taking a Blue Jays team that was 50-51 and eight games back of first place on the day Tulowitzki entered the lineup on a 42-14 run up the standings, past the New York Yankees and into October.

Winning the division seemed inevitable in recent days as the Yankees struggled and the Blue Jays kept rolling.

The final victory of that accomplishment came Wednesday with young stud Stroman on the mound in just his fourth start of the season following a torn ACL in spring training. Stroman (4-0) was masterful yet again, striking out eight and allowing just one run on five hits in eight innings.

In typical Blue Jays fashion, the most productive lineup in baseball led the way by tormenting opposing pitching. With Anthopoulos watching in the first row above the visiting dugout, the Blue Jays poured it on, scoring four runs in the fifth.

Edwin Encarnacion hit his 37th home run of the season, a two-run shot, in the seventh to get to double digits, and Jose Bautista hit his 40th in the ninth. Justin Smoak added a two-run shot to put an exclamation point on the blow-out.

It was the 41st time in 157 games Toronto scored eight or more runs.

CFL Player of month Burris only focused on wins late in season

Henry Burris says awards are nice, but something to think about after the season.

The 40-year-old quarterback was named the CFL's top player of September on Wednesday and while Burris appreciated the honour he says he'll be a lot happier if his Redblacks (7-5) can beat the Montreal Alouettes (5-7) Thursday night.

"I never take this award on “It doesn't define the whole game, but it's always good to start fast.

Redblacks head coach Rick Campbell is looking for a strong start after falling behind 14-0 early to the Argos last week.

myself because it just exposes all the great work all the guys from the coaching staff down have done ... this is a tribute to all the hard work that we've put in," said Burris. "Now it's time to take the honour that we've just received and carry it over to the field that we continue to get better each and every week."

"We need to get victories on the field. Right now it's crunch time."

The Redblacks are coming off a 35-26 home loss to Toronto that moved the Argos into second place in the CFL East. With a rematch against the Argos less than a week away, Burris says it's important for Ottawa to get back on track.

Ottawa is in the midst of a weird schedule as they play three games in a span of 11 days.

"I think everyone was so focused on the three games in (11) days that we looked forward to how it's going to feel after these three games instead of focusing on the one that mattered which was Toronto and we got our butts kicked," said Burris. "Now it's time for us to respond. Everybody's waiting to see how this team is going to respond,

MONTREAL MOVE Als bring in LB Muamba

The Montreal Alouettes have agreed to terms with free agent linebacker Henoc Muamba.

The former Winnipeg Blue Bomber and Indianapolis Colt was in Montreal on Wednesday for a medical examination. He will not be ready to play Thursday night against the Redblacks in Ottawa.

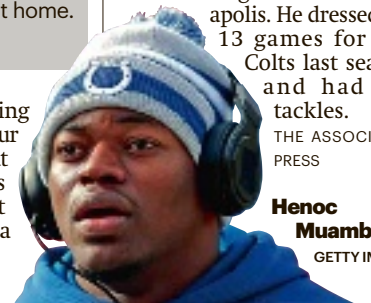

Muamba, 26, was drafted first overall by Winnipeg in 2011 from St. Francis Xavier University. He was the Bombers' player of the year in 2013 when he had 106 defensive tackles.

He was released in February 2014 to pursue an NFL career and signed with Indianapolis. He dressed for 13 games for the Colts last season and had six tackles.

CHAMPIONS LEAGUE

Phenomenal Portuguese passes Raul's benchmark

Cristiano Ronaldo surpassed the 500-goal mark and Real Madrid hailed him as the club's all-time leading scorer on Wednesday.

Ronaldo scored his 500th and 501st goals — in a two-nil away win at Swedish outfit Malmö — passing Raul's mark of 323 goals according to the Spanish club, which counts a goal that has officially been awarded to Pepe. UEFA said the players are still level at 323.

"I'm very happy," Ronaldo said after a game in which he scored in the 29th and 90th minutes. "First of all because the team won. But I won't lie to you. I really wanted to beat Raul's record."

The Portuguese forward took his Champions League record tally to 82 goals, five more than Lionel Messi. Here is a look at all of Wednesday's Champions League matches:

Group A

Ronaldo's brace ensured Real Madrid kept its share of the Group A lead, along with Paris Saint-Germain.

PSG eased to a 3-0 win at Shakhtar after defender Serge Aurier scored a goal and set up another. The Ivory Coast right back headed in PSG's opener in the seventh minute and served up a corner kick for David Luiz to make it 2-0 in the 23rd.

A Darijo Srna own goal in the 90th completed the victory.

Group B

All four Group B teams are now level on three points after Manchester United defeated Wolfsburg 2-1 in England and CSKA Moscow edged PSV Eindhoven 3-2 at home. Juan Mata scored one goal and set up another as United rallied to win its first group match.

Daniel Caligiuri put Wolfsburg ahead after four minutes, but Mata won and converted a penalty to equalize before half-time and Chris Smalling slotted the ball past Diego Benaglio to seal the win in the 53rd. In Russia, Seydou Doumbia scored twice as CSKA held off a second-half comeback to beat PSV 3-2.

Group C

Benfica moved into a comfortable position atop Group C with the surprise 2-1 win at Atletico Madrid, opening a three-point advantage after two matches.

Benfica has six points and Atletico has three, while Galatasaray and Astana, which drew 2-2 in Kazakhstan earlier Wednesday, have one point each.

There were three own goals in the match in Kazakhstan, including Astana's 89th-minute equalizer. It was the first game in the main stages of the Champions League to be held in the Asian nation of Kazakhstan, which has been considered part of Europe for football purposes since 2002.

Juventus stayed ahead in Group D by defeating Sevilla 2-0 in Italy, while City's first victory came at Borussia Mönchengladbach. Manchester City moved level with Sevilla after Sergio Aguero scored a last-minute penalty to help the English side snatch a 2-1 victory in Germany.

Hoilett commits future to Team Canada

David (Junior) Hoilett has declared to play for Canada.

The 25-year-old midfielder from Brampton, Ont., plays his club soccer for Queens Park Rangers in England's second tier. But his international future has been a question mark until now.

"I can't wait to play, put on the Canada jersey for the first time, and help the team achieve better things and progress as a nation," Hoilett said in a video interview provided by the Canadian Soccer Association.

Hoilett is also eligible to play for Jamaica by virtue of his parents. England was also a possibility by virtue of his time spent there. The speedy winger is expected to join the Canadian national team next week in Florida in advance of an a friendly against Ghana in Washington, D.C.

Benito Floro's team is preparing for the November start of the fourth round of World Cup qualifying in the CONCACAF region. Canada hosts Honduras on Nov. 13 in Vancouver before playing in El Salvador on Nov. 17.

Hoilett said he made his decision to join the Canadian fold after meeting with Floro.

Hoilett has seen limited action for QPR this season, appearing in just two cup games. British reports have linked him to a move away from the London club in recent months.

He played for Blackburn Rovers previously in England and had earlier stints with Paderborn and St. Pauli in Germany. THE CANADIAN PRESS

RECIPE Mushroom Barley Soup

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

Whip up a pot of this simple, earthy soup and have leftovers for lunch the next day.

Ready in
Prep time: 25 minutes
Serves 6

Ingredients

- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- 2 or 3 cloves of garlic, minced
- 1 onion, diced
- 2 medium carrots, peeled, diced
- 2 stalks of celery diced
- 1 lb of cremini mushrooms, brushed clean and sliced
- 2 Tbsp fresh thyme (less if using dried)

- 3/4 cup of pearl barley
- 5 cups of stock (vegetable, chicken or beef all work)
- Salt and pepper to taste

Directions

1. In a large pot or Dutch oven warm up the olive oil over medium heat. Add your vegetables and thyme and allow to soften for about 3 to 5 minutes.
2. Add the barley and give it a good stir to coat it. Now pour the stock over and allow soup to simmer for about 20 minutes until the barley is tender but still chewy. Taste to check seasoning.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS by Sally Brompton

Aries March 21 - April 20
Your imagination is so powerful there is a danger you could let your fears get out of hand. There are two ways to deal with your current dilemma: either do something about it or act as if it does not exist.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
Someone will go out of their way for you today, which makes you suspicious. What are they after? What's in it for them? The question you should be asking is: why can't I just accept that some people are nice by nature?

Gemini May 22 - June 21
What occurs today will help you see things in perspective. It will also remind you that life is too short to waste on things that don't matter.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
You may be under the impression that you can say anything to anyone and get away with it but don't be so sure. You seem to be under divine protection but it could rapidly be withdrawn.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
You ought to make it up to someone you've been neglecting. That's fine but don't be too generous — what others want most is your attention, they don't care about cash.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You will be hugely responsive to other people's moods but you need to take care that their negative feelings don't start having a negative effect on you. Erect an emotional wall.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Some things are best left in the realms of fantasy. Having a dream is one thing but what if, when it comes true, you find it is really a nightmare? Stick to reality, it's safer.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You won't lack for compassion today but you may lack for common sense. Don't let others fool you into thinking that you are doing the right thing, when in fact the real right thing is to leave well alone.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Try to impress, especially people who can help with your ambitions, but don't go too far and claim you can deliver results that are really way beyond you. Even a Sag has limits.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Don't let rivals undermine your confidence today, especially on the work front where a setback has already put a dent in your morale. You will soon be moving up again.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Try not to let others know too much about what you are doing. Knowledge is power and the more knowledge you give away the less power you have for yourself.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
Relationships will generally go well today but be wary of anyone whose attitude towards you goes from one extreme to the other in a matter of minutes. It could be they are trying to confuse you for their own benefit.
